Teaching History Beyond Four-Year College

Panel Discussion // Thursday, September 27th
4:30–6:30 p.m. // 3335 Dwinelle Hall

Mike Buckley has worked at Convent and Stuart Hall High Schools since 2000, including during his time at Berkeley. Convent and Stuart Hall is a Catholic, independent, coeducational institution. He graduated from Berkeley in 2009.

Joseph Nejad-Duong teaches at Fremont High, a public high school school in East Oakland, and at Cal State University East Bay. Previously, he taught at San Francisco State and Las Positas College. He graduated from Berkeley in 2014.

Adrianne Francisco began her career as an independent school teacher 3 days after submitting her dissertation. She currently works at the Drew School, a college preparatory school in San Francisco. She graduated from Berkeley in 2015.

Rachel Reinhard works as the director of the UC Berkeley History-Social Science Project. After graduating from Berkeley in 2005, she taught for three years at SUNY Cortland. She now draws upon her experience as a teacher, professor, and professional development provider to help improve teacher practice and student learning.

Ashley Leyba received her PhD from Berkeley in 2014. After graduating, she taught middle school history at BASIS Independent Silicon Valley before moving into school administration as the Director of Academic Programs. In 2016, she became the founding Head of School for BASIS Independent Fremont, a private K-8 school that is now in its third year of operation.

Tim Rose is a faculty member at Berkeley City College (BCC). In 2004, while completing his doctoral dissertation, he began teaching as an adjunct instructor at Vista Community College (now BCC). One year later, he was hired by Laney College as a full-time history instructor. In 2009, he was granted tenure in the Peralta Community College District.